Islamic Fostering Service Features on Cover of Community Care Magazine in Good Practice Feature

Foster Care Link's Islamic Fostering Service was extremely pleased to be featured on the front cover of Community Care, the publication recognised at the popular and well-read social care magazine in the UK. The edition dated 3rd July 2008 also contained an extensive article on the good work the agency does with Muslim children in care through the Islamic Fostering Service.

Rowenna Davis attended the FCL office and spoke to various members of the staff team. Her interview culminated in a decision by Community Care to feature the agency on its front cover. A photographer then visited within the same week and took photos in the of the team within the agency office as well as outside the local Aziziye Mosque to take advantage of the beautiful Iznik tiles imported from Turkey which adorn the main entrance.

The article was very positive and included information on how the service works to safeguard Muslim children from extremism.

For more information visit the Community Care website for the full article, which should soon also be available for download from the Foster Care Link website – see details below.
